Content

The course aims to develop the student's knowledge of different traditions within textile design through studying dominant international and specific local perspectives. The course also aims to develop the student's ability to describe and critically discuss their own and others' design work based on contemporary perspectives within the field of textile design, particularly with regard to sustainable development and design ethics. The main content of the course is as follows:

- Presentation and discussion of traditions and contemporary concepts based on international as well as local perspectives within textile design
- Form and concept studies through reconstructions and own design work
- Criticism and interpretive exercises of one's own design work with reference to contemporary perspectives, practices and forms of presentation

Learning Outcomes

After completing the course, students should be able to:

1. demonstrate basic knowledge and understanding of dominant international as well as specific local geographical traditions in textile design,
2. analyse their own work and that of others based on a contemporary perspective within textile design,
3. position and reflect on their own design work in relation to experimental and professional design practice and its social implications.

Forms of Teaching

Tuition consists of lectures, study visits, seminars and supervision.
